Product Description

texture of material

Agarwood is a precious and rare type of wood, originating from trees of the agarwood genus in the family Rosaceae. When these trees are injured or infected by fungi, they secrete a type of resin to protect themselves, which accumulates and changes over a long period of time to form agarwood.

Texture Aesthetics: The beads on the bracelet present unique dark textures that are natural and aesthetically pleasing. Each bead has a different texture, reflecting the uniqueness of natural materials.

workmanship

Fine polishing: The surface of the beads is smooth, and after fine polishing, it feels comfortable to the touch. This polishing process not only enhances the aesthetics of the bracelet, but also increases the comfort of wearing it.

High roundness: The roundness of each bead is very high, indicating that the shape of the beads was carefully processed during the production process, ensuring the overall coordination of the bracelet.

selling point

Agarwood has a unique aroma, which is elegant and long-lasting. When wearing this agarwood bracelet, as the wrist swings, it emits a faint aroma of agarwood, giving people a peaceful and comfortable feeling. This aroma also helps to soothe emotions and reduce stress.

Cultural connotation

Agarwood holds an important position in many cultures and is often associated with Zen and meditation. Wearing agarwood bracelets is not only a decoration, but also a continuation of traditional culture and a pursuit of inner peace.

Collection value

Due to the rarity of agarwood and the particularity of its formation process, agarwood products have high collectible value. Over time, the value of agarwood bracelets may continue to increase.

Wearing experience

High comfort: The beads on the bracelet are of moderate size, making it neither too bulky nor too small to lose its presence when worn on the wrist. Meanwhile, the smooth bead surface and rounded shape ensure comfortable wearing.
